Religious Feeling In Work Of Leslie Emery Finds Wide Popular Response

BY BOB KALLER

A profoundly religious man, although a regular attendant at no particular church, Leslie Emery, Carmel painter, shows in his work his preoccupation with the inner life. He works with a small motto glued to his easel which says, "Thine is the kingdom wherein I work; Thine is the power by which I work, and Thine is the glory of accomplished work." Whether the public merely began to be sharply aware of his maturing talents and distinctive style or whether his subjects were just right for the general wave of religious feeling that has swept the country during the past decade, the fact is that Emery is so much in demand not only for his general canvases but for his portrait work, that he has had to limit the number of assignments of the latter that he can accept.

Emery was born in the little town of Turner's Falls, Massachusetts in 1912. His father's family had lived in New England since 1634, while his mother was from the South. At a fairly young age, Les moved with his family to Washington, D.C., where his father ran a baking manufacturing business.

Here Les grew up and spent the formative years of his life—with one important exception. His family kept a farm in New England, and every year his mother would return with the boys (Les had two brothers) in time to watch the leaves turn color in the Fall.

There is no doubt that Emery's mother exerted a strong influence on his future course of development—if only because she insisted that he see what he looked at and hear what he listened to. She would stop the car on an empty road and make Leslie pay attention to the notes of a bullfrog's call. She would point out the particular, and ever-changing facets of nature.

From her Emery learned to look within himself, and to seek for means of expression. His mother had been a singer and a soloist in the Christian Science Church, and her mark remains to this day, as Emery freely admits. Yet his feeling and understanding of Catholic liturgical art is such that he was commissioned by the Sacred Heart Society to paint the Blessed Virgin that was their official picture for (Continued on Page Four)

Highlands Assn. Opposed To Weston-Patterson Down Coast Restaurant

The action of the Carmel Highlands Advisory Committee in recommending against the application to the County Planning Commission of Steve Patterson and Cole Weston for re-zoning of 28 acres on the south side of Garrapata Creek, 650 feet west of the Highway Number One, from residence to commercial use, for the establishment of a recreation area and restaurant, was unanimously supported in a vocal vote by the 50 members of the Carmel Highlands Association at a special capacity meeting at the Highlands Fire House on Monday evening. President John Zellhoefer, on the demand of T. R. Balentine, called for a hand showing on a second motion proposed by Tom Hudson and a 27-12 vote decided that there be no further discussion of the subject until another application was submitted to the County Planning Commission by Patterson and Weston.

This, as shown by the vote, met with opposition as 12 members present felt that a definite opinion as to the desirability of a restaurant in this location should be discussed and decided at Monday night's meeting.

Dr. R. A. Kocher, temporary chairman of the advisory committee, opening discussion, stated he

Mrs. McDonald Killed, Raggett Injured In Wreck

The death of Mrs. Robert H. McDonald and serious injury to Mark Raggett occurred on Tuesday evening at 10:20 o'clock when they were involved in an automobile accident on the second curve west of the Salinas River Bridge. Mrs. McDonald, secretary of the county grand jury, and Raggett, a member, were returning from a meeting of the group when the accident took place. Driver of the other car involved was George Kulish of Hollister, who was also seriously injured. The California Highway Patrol reports that District Attorney William Stoffers is bringing manslaughter charges against Kulish on the basis that his car was on the left side of the center line, going east towards Salinas.

All three were taken to the Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital where Mrs. McDonald was reported dead upon arrival. Raggett had a fractured right forearm and multiple contusions and abrasions. Raggett will remain in the Salinas hospital until his condition warrants his removal.

Aurelia "Mickey" McDonald came to Carmel to live in 1939 and her marriage to Robert H. McDonald took place in 1942. She was born in Pennsylvania on December 11, 1909, but came to live in California as a child and grew up in Lone, Amador County.

Mrs. McDonald's charming and enthusiastic personality coupled with her executive ability drew her into many community activities. Last year she was president of the Monterey Peninsula League of Women Voters. She worked with both the Red Cross and the Community Chest during the 16 years she had lived here. An ardent golfer, she was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country (Continued on Page Twelve)

Why Not A Sales Tax On Motel Accommodations To Pay For An Auditorium?

Mrs. Grace Howden, a long time resident of Carmel, an instigator of the Monterey County Symphony and other local musical projects, returns from a trip to Hawaii to find that an auditorium committee has been active and has chosen a site, Monterey Peninsula College, but has not decided on a means of financing the project. Mrs. Howden favors a site that had community approval when the need of an auditorium was first discussed in 1946. Also, she proposes a means of financing it, a tax on motel and hotel accommodations. At present almost all business in the state, except the hotel and motel business, is subject to a sales tax.

The Pine Cone invites further discussion on this subject.

BY GRACE C. HOWDEN

"The Peninsula has suddenly become alive musically!"

This statement shook me from a lethargy recently as I was leaving the colorful little chapel at the Church of the Wayfarer where I had been meditating on the charm of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

There are so many lovely musical ventures in the embryonic stage ready for the metamorphosis into gorgeous new life, such as Grand Opera and Ballet! These projects, like our Symphony Orchestra, would be non-profit organizations.

Do they make the immediate need of a fine auditorium mandatory? We must provide a platform for the presentation of such vigorous endeavors. Can we not have one unusually beautiful building, high on a hill, its top bathed in light, to which we can point with pride as an artistic asset to the preservation of the beauty of this Monterey Peninsula? The many artists on the Peninsula probably would subscribe to this idea.

The Auditorium could be a living memorial to the heroes of our community who gave their lives for our country. Such a memorial might be added to the many miracles manifest here, like our wonderful symphony orchestra of sixty players now in its tenth successful season under the inspired direction of our brilliant conductor, Gregory Millar.

Let us face the problem squarely. It is only human nature to wish to put off the inevitable day when one must plan for the larger expenditures necessary for any kind of project.

Eastern people are flocking to California, reminiscent of Gold Rush days of '49. Right now we are unable to build schools fast enough to accommodate their offspring. With the estimated increase in population on the peninsula of 25,000 people in the next five years, there will be plenty for everyone who is already established in business.

I am told by informed Monterey people that there is already a need for a good first class hotel. Motels are all right in their proper location but they cannot supply the comfort and facilities offered in a modern hotel.

I believe that a hotel similar to the Claremont in Berkeley would be a big success in this environment almost from the outset.

The many relatives and friends of the students and teachers at the various government installations and other institutions of learning would always keep a modern hotel, centrally located, completely filled. With such a hotel adjacent to the auditorium each would help toward maintenance of the other.

The most equi-distant site for a civic auditorium is the one on the summit of the ridge which extends along the backbone of the Penin- (Continued on Page Twelve)

Revision Of Cable Ordinance Puts Off Execution One Month

The Carmel City Council was never less unanimous than it was at its regular meeting last night. Mayor Horace Lyon held out bitterly and at length against the interim ordinance giving power over all building permits in the business district to the planning commission. Mayor Lyon considers the ordinance premature, arbitrary and unnecessary. It has the approval of the planning commission, and Planning Commission Chairman Frank Putnam was at the council meeting to plug for it. He repeated the theme he has employed on numerous occasions, "Our zoning ordinances are inadequate and we must have an interim ordinance to hold the line until the master plan can be formulated."

Other council members agreed with him and the interim ordinance was passed, with the mayor's dissenting vote.

The miserable mistake three members of the council are determined to make and will live to regret got a mild revision. Gerald- (Continued on Page Twelve)

Two Minutes Silence Citizens' Tribute On Veterans Day

Mayor Horace D. Lyon announced this week that the various organizations of the Monterey Peninsula are commemorating November 11 as Veterans Day with two minutes of silence at 11:00 o'clock in the morning. This will be signaled by a salute at the high school grounds, fired by an artillery unit from Fort Ord.

There will be a parade through Monterey at 12:30, followed by a football game at Monterey Peninsula College between the Fort Ord Warriors and the Fort Bliss team commencing at 2:00. This will benefit the Veterans' Fund of the Monterey Peninsula.

The traditional Carmel-Pacific Grove High School football game will be played at Pacific Grove starting at 12:15.

Mayor Lyon urged the citizens of Carmel to observe the two minutes of silence at 11:00 o'clock tomorrow morning and lend their support to the other activities of the day.

CARMEL-PG BIG GAME FRIDAY AFTERNOON

It's Big Game time for Carmel and Pacific Grove prep gridders this Friday afternoon at the PG gridiron where the Padres and Breakers will clash in a Monterey Peninsula big grid natural. No matter what the teams have done in previous games, the Veteran's Day clash is always full of surprises and this year's crucial tilt finds both teams evenly matched in all departments. The Breakers have a 5-2 record for the season, losing to Hollister and Gilroy while beating Junipero, St. Elizabeths, Gonzales, Live Oak, and King City. Carmel's 6-1 record is marred by a loss to Hollister but is built up by a 13-0 upset win over the powerful Gilroy eleven. Comparative scores favor the Breakers in some instances and show the Padres to advantage in others. Coach Herb Schmalenberger's stalwarts downed King City, 26 to 0, while Carmel was hard-pressed to eke a 7-0 win over the Mustangs. The Breakers also scored 27 points against Gonzales while the Padres were held to two touchdowns against the same Spartan eleven. Hollister blasted Pacific Grove, 27 to 6, and dumped Carmel, 33 to 13, so the statistics show about even-up in this one. Against Gilroy the Padres have a big edge as the Mustangs clobbered PG, 27 to 0, and were blanked by Carmel. But, as all football filberts will tell you, comparative scores mean absolutely nothing when the Padres and Breakers square off across the line and start hitting from a fired-up position.

Pacific Grove, led by their All-CCAL quarterback, Eddie Estaban, has a veteran crew featuring the swift running of Cardoza and Estaban and the fine pass receiving of Bates, Yazaga, and Rowher. The Breakers line, anchored by Ken Down, Ben Moseley, and Jim Yuma, is big, fast, and seasoned by two years varsity experience.

Carmel, while boasting no all-league performers, has a well-balanced squad which has displayed outstanding teamwork on both offense and defense. Captain Bob Michela leads a sturdy line of John Thompson, center; Dick Ogden, Mike Meheen, and Joe Mason, guards; Pat Erwin, Kyrk Reid, Harry Baxter, Brian Leidig, and Bob Frizzell, tackles; George Wightman, Dick Jennings, Mervin

Sutton, and Bob Wise, ends; and Sid Trevvett, defensive specialist at left guard. Co-captain Mike Mosolf leads a backfield contingent of West Whittaker, Ron Huffman, Bill McCormack, Dick Holt, Charley Dawson, and Clyde Klaumann. These lads can all move the ball along the ground and are clever pass receivers off the spread and split-T attack employed by the Padres.

In a 12:15 preliminary game, the Carmel junior-varsity will lay its undefeated record on the block against the twice-beaten PG Wavelets. Coach Fred Rainer will start with a team of Captain Jim Konrad, Charley Leavitt, Andy Gray, and David Ostrander, backs; ends, Pat Harney and Don Smith; tackles, Art Wilkerson and Bob Leidig; guards, John Morse and Neil Giarratana; center, John Stiles.

CARMEL MEETING FOR COACHES - SPORTSWRITERS

Next Monday night at 7:30, coaches and sportswriters of the Coast Counties Athletic League will gather for a dinner meeting at the Mission Ranch to hash over the just-completed football season and honor the outstanding players with positions on the mythical All-CCAL teams. Schools and newspapers will be represented from Gilroy, Morgan Hill, King City, Watsonville, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Carmel, Pacific Grove, Salinas, Hollister, and Gonzales. After replaying all the games of the season, the representatives will select all-league lightweight and varsity teams for the A division of the CCAL and a varsity team for the B division.

In the B division, there are five holdovers from last year's All-League team. Gilroy has three in Bob Harrison, tackle, Julian Aguilar, end, and Jim Fahey, halfback. Clem Albertoni, Gonzales tackle, also made the team as did Pacific Grove's nifty quarterback, Eddie Estaban. Competition for positions on this year's all-league squad should be close as there are outstanding players at all positions. This corner would feel pretty confident sending a team into high school competition composed of Joe Bass (Gonzales) and George Wightman (Carmel), ends; Bob Harrison and Bob Mazzucca (Gilroy), tackles; Dick Ogden and Bob Michela (Carmel), guards; Jim Yuma (Pacific Grove), center; Mike Mosolf (Carmel), quarterback; Jim Fahey (Gilroy) and Fred Silva (Hollister), halfbacks; and Chuck Zanella (Hollister), fullback.

PADRES WIN PAIR FROM LIVE OAK

Carmel High's varsity and junior varsity football squads had an offensive field day against the green but hard-trying Live Oak teams last Saturday afternoon, winning the JV tilt, 45 to 12 and blasting to a 55 to 0 win in the varsity fracas. Lack of playing experience was a big handicap to both Live Oak squads and the seasoned Carmel gridders riddled the porous Acorn defense with their crisp blocking and accurate passing attack.

Carmel's varsity had a touchdown on its first offensive play as Mike Mosolf gathered in a Live Oak punt and galloped 55 yards for the score. A blocking wall led by Captain Bob Michela, Dick Ogden, and John Thompson cleared the way for the skinny Carmel quarterback on his scoring jaunt. Kyrk Reid, the CCAL's top conversion expert, made good on the conversion as he did on 7 out of 8 attempts. West Whittaker, shifty Padre left halfback, zipped 27 yards for the second score as the excellent blocking of Pat Erwin and George Wightman cleared an open running lane. Late in the second quarter, Carmel picked up touchdown number three when Mosolf lofted a 45-yard aerial to Clyde Klaumann to make the half-time score, 20 to 0.

While Klaumann, Wightman, Mosolf, Wise, and Dawson were moving the Carmel offensive for scores in the second half, the Padre defense was practically invulnerable. Led by a pair of hard-charging guards, Sid Trevvett and Bob Michela, the solid red and gray line thwarted every running play attempted by the Oaks and set them back for minus yardage gained during the afternoon. This makes the fifth opponent to draw a blank against the aggressive

Padre defense crew this season. Coach Fred Rainer's undefeated junior-varsity notched consecutive win number ten in a most convincing fashion, racking up seven touchdowns and having 6 called back because of penalties. Four complete teams got into the act against the Live Oak Babes and each eleven was able to hit pay dirt. The hard running of backs David Ostrander, Jim Konrad, Charley Leavitt, Andy Gray, Bill Harder, Pete Phillips, Jim Lee, and Bruce Haphey wore down the out-manned visitors from Morgan Hill.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

The spiritual basis of man's health and life will be emphasized at Christian Science services this Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Mortals and Immortals."

Man's dominion over disease will be set forth in readings from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, including the following passage (14:25): "Entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living, is the Life divine, revealing spiritual understanding and the consciousness of man's dominion over the whole earth."

Scriptural selections to be read will include the following from Matthew (15:30): "And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them."

Highlands Opposed To Weston-Patterson Coast Restaurant

"Garapata is the epitome of the wild coast land" was her statement, and part of the proposed recreation area-restaurant project was "on an area on the master plan proposed for beach acquisition." Mrs. Williams felt that it was "the duty" of the board, which in advisory capacity covers a territory from the Carmel River to Bixby Creek, "to keep anything from changing character until such time as taken over by the state." It was also in her opinion the duty of the board to decide "whether zoning should be changed without real cause or need."

Cole Weston described the proposed restaurant as one that would be "unique on the Pacific Coast." It is the plan of Weston and Patterson to bring fresh water, pumped from Garapata Creek, to the top of the knoll on the site which would then fall in an artificial waterfall to a pond stocked with trout. The fish could be caught by patrons, and, if desired, cooked and served in the restaurant which would also have tanks filled with salt water, pumped from the ocean, stocked with crabs and lobsters, also to be selected and cooked by patrons if desired. Type of design would be low, in accordance with the advisory board's architectural decisions and surrounded by cypress trees and other fine planting.

Steve Patterson stated there would be no bar and dance hall on the site. It was to be a place where parents could "sip a cocktail and watch the kids fish" not "get drunk and raise hell." He remarked that when running a restaurant in Carmel he had discontinued the serving of beer and wine after four months, when one drunken person caused a disturbance in his family-patronized restaurant. The site at Garapata is now "covered with tin cans, boxes and garbage" he stated. His proposed development would not "be a detriment but an improvement" to the area. He would allow free access to the beach over his property.

Francis Heisler was of the opinion, "we Highlanders should not amend the master plan and forget people who will later use the beach. We should think of the people of the future." Weston countered with the remark that he and Patterson had no idea of "scuttling the master plan." Heisler brought to the attention of those present that if the State of California saw fit to place Garapata beach third on their $10,000,000 list of acquisitions, and, as it was now in the place of first on the priority list, great consideration should be given to any proposed change in zoning in the area.

Everett Banfield, Sr., quoting Thomas Elston, county planning commission chairman, stated that according to "slide rule experts" the Monterey Peninsula was due to become the "third largest center of population in the state." With this in view, "as choice a beach as Garapata, the whole strip along the coast should be protected" and there was distinct responsibility to "direct flow and current" in zoning matters. However, Banfield felt that the proposed development, "properly done in accordance with the county planning commission might, tie in with the Coast Road scenery." He was of the opinion that it might be "a credit to improve the present blot" on the landscape near the Highway, and, considering future population increase, provide facilities for enjoyment of the area.

John Zellhoefer asked if the proposed building would not increase the purchase price of the site if the state decided to acquire the property. On the request of Francis Heisler, Tom Hudson answered the question and said, "The state must pay for it" if the project was developed on property eventually purchased by the state.

On the demand of Dr. H. J. Templeton the unanimous vote of confidence in the action of the advisory board in recommending against the application for the Weston-Patterson project is to be transmitted to the County Planning Commission by the secretary of the Highlands association. Secretarial duties were performed on Monday night by Mrs. Hal Boyd in the absence of the regular secretary, Mrs. Malcolm Millard.

Discussion will follow, and anyone interested in hearing these first hand reports on the conference is welcome to attend. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Joseph Wythe, 5-7874.

Religious Feeling In Leslie Emery's Work Finds Wide Response

the Marian year and sent all over the world in reproduction. After preliminary schooling in Washington, Les entered Georgetown University, but a couple of years decided him that the pre-medical course he was taking was not for him.

When Emery was still a boy in his teens, Lindbergh's flight to Paris had inspired him, and he had molded a head of the Lone Eagle out of clay in his back yard. The favorable comment this had excited led in turn to more carving and more sketching. At the University, several teachers suggested that Emery do surgical sketching for extra pay and this he did. Finally Les left to enter the Corcoran School of Art, given at the famous gallery.

He remained three years, taking a classic course with strong emphasis on the Old Masters, of whom plenty of examples were available. At the end of that time Emery won the institute's "Concours" or grand prize, which carried with it a financial award plus the use of a studio for a year.

Unfortunately, a modernist trend set in that year in the teaching approach, with stress on illustrations by the instructor. In jig time the classes began to turn out almost carbon copies of the instructor's work. Emery found this so painful to watch as he walked through the large workhall to his studio, that he closed the door one day on his free work space and never returned.

He opened a studio of his own in Washington and set out to make a living with portrait work. The pickings were slim. In a fairly desperate mood, about a year later, he grasped at the offer of a friend to use a lonely cabin on a sheep ranch near Walsenburg, Colorado. Here he prepared to answer the eternal question facing the struggling creative worker, "Is it worth it?" Apparently it was, for he still speaks of the period with pleasure.

Returning to New York in 1937 he did some desultory work for advertising agencies. He worked as a so-called "Chinese artist" for the Washington Herald — filling in ads. He drove a bakery truck.

He joined the government art project and did portraits of deceased judges and ex-governors of Virginia for public buildings.

Then Harry Seibold of the Veerhoff Galleries, the man who had been in charge of restoring the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution documents, commissioned Emery to do some restoring work, and this relationship lasted intermittently for several years.

Emery says he found the work fascinating. It taught him the chemistry of paint. It taught him to paint on masonite instead of canvas, since the former lasts as long as wood panels do. It taught him never to paint over a color area he was dissatisfied with, but to remove the old paint completely first. He also found that in most cases glazing was not permanent.

His portrait assignments in his Washington studio had picked up by this time, in addition to the restoring work, and for the first time Emery found that he was rolling along in his chosen profession. In the next period of time he painted Senators and diplomats till they came out of his ears.

More importantly he began to work a great deal with broken color. In this latter, the artist mixes his colors on canvas instead of on the palette, and the results are particularly good for skin textures. The French modernists use the technique a great deal, Emery points out, and it has been characteristic of his work ever since.

Many painters, Emery observes, use a green base in doing a portrait, and no matter how many times overlaid, this eventually shows through.

It was also during this time that Emery developed what might be called a Fresco technique of doing portraits. In other words, Emery first does a pencil drawing, followed by a first painting to establish color relationships. He then takes one area at a time like a Fresco painter, and works it over thoroughly to a satisfactory conclusion, thence proceeding to the next.

When the war came along, Emery went into the Air Force, trained as a gunner and bombardier, and eventually joined a B-25 crew, with whom he flew through the African and Italian campaigns. He ended up the war near Rimini in Italy, and got a pretty good chance to explore Italian museums and art galleries before shipping home.

Back in the States, Emery took up his residence in Virginia again and married. He returned to portrait work and in 1946 came to Hollywood on a commission to do several paintings of movie starlet Joan Marsh and composer Johnny Green's wife, Bonnie. On the way home, he and his wife drove up the

Hatton Canyon Tract Owners Petition To Join Sanitary District

Carmel Land Company and several individual property owners presented a petition for annexation to the Carmel Sanitary District at the district board meeting Monday night. With acceptance of the petition, another large area of land east of Highway One becomes a part of the district. Carmel Hills Two, the area lying along Highway One between Carmel High School and the valley road, has already joined the district. Carmel Hills One, the development north of the high school, is expected to join soon, as a petition for annexation is now being circulated by a property owner among other property owners of the area.

The petitioners, at Monday night's meeting, representing property along Hatton Canyon east of the high school from valley road to a line extending east from Peninsula Community Hospital, were Mary S. Hatton, Charles A. Fuller and W. L. Hudson, who own individual portions in addition to the Carmel Land Company holdings. This is along the route the proposed freeway for Highway Number One.

A trunk sewer line eventually will be put down the canyon, and when this is done, the cost of construction will be divided among the users. Also, each lot must pay an "entrance fee" to buy in on the capital investment the rest of the sanitary district has in the treatment plant at Carmel River.

The high school is also in the area but at the school board meeting last month the trustees decided to hold off petitioning for annexation. The school uses the sanitary district facilities on a fee basis, 75 cents per pupil per year, which runs around $250 a year.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

Next week, November 13 through 19, is Book Week, an event celebrated by all those who love children's books. This library will have a great number of new juvenile books which will be on display all week. We shall also have on exhibit a juvenile book-in-the-making, with layout, script, and many charming drawings as illustrations. This is the work of a local artist and the library is fortunate to have it for display before it goes to a publisher. It will give the children a chance to see that books require much painstaking effort and are not just born, complete with book-jackets in plastic covers.

Teachers are urged to bring their classes to the library during the week so that all the children will get a chance to look at the new books. We shall be happy to arrange appointments for these classes to come before the library opens in the morning, if this works in better with class schedules.

The slogan for Book Week this year is, Let's Read More. With the increased leisure of our times, the art of reading and enjoying a good book is one that is vital for children to learn. They can't watch spectacles all day long.

To take a brief look at some of these new juvenile books, let's consider first those for the older girls. We have a new one by Betty Cavanaugh entitled Passport to Romance, a story of a girl who went to Switzerland for a year. She went for school and for skiing, and found romance. Maude Hart Lovelace has a new Betsy-Tacy book entitled Betsy's Wedding. A story about a 16 year old girl in New Mexico is by Elizabeth Friermood and is entitled Candle in the Sun. Another for the older girls is Rebecca Caudill's new one called Susan Cornish and is the story of an 18 year old girl who went into the deep south as a teacher.

For the boys we have Kit Carson and the Wild Frontier by Ralph Moody. This is one of the famous Landmark books. Also for boys is Base Burglar, by Scholz, which is a baseball story. Boys will also enjoy a new mystery entitled The Secret of the Old Salem Desk, by Molloy, and a new story about boxing by Frank Waldman which is entitled The Challenger.

For the younger children we have so many beautiful new books that choosing which ones to mention is almost impossible. Three books about the horse named Blaze were written by C. W. Anderson, and also illustrated by him. He does a beautiful job of both writing and illustrating. Louise Fatio has a new one about her famous happy lion, this one entitled The Happy Lion in Africa. A Happy Lion who goes back to Africa is not always so happy as he was in his comfortable lion house at home in the zoo. The Petershams have written The Boy Who Had No Heart, and illustrated it with lovely pictures in color. Another Japanese story by Yashima is charming and so is one about a little Indian child called Doki the Lonely Papoose, by Marianna. Margot Austin has one for children who love to pretend, and it is called Brave John Henry.

We shall have a lot of new books for adults going up that week too, but the books for children were so much more important, that we can't take space to mention any-

Latest Thing In Natty Male Attire: Pockets For Lead

Skin diver of this weekend was Jack. He came over with a large group of the undersea men from Fresno who were accompanied by their wives, children, parents and dogs. Everyone settled on the river beach for a fine day of sea, sun, and abalone fresh from the ocean and cooked over an open fire.

But to get back to Jack, we think that was his name because it was painted in bright red all across the front of his beige Italian sponge rubber suit. The suit had all the good lines of the new Italian clothes including a helmet which extended over the head in the manner of those striped shirts, a tight fitting midriff where the pants of the two piece suit met the shirt top, and shoes to match which went under a pair of the longest swim fins seen in these parts, also matching. There was a becoming belt with pouches filled with lead to weigh him down when he dived, a snorkel, and full oxygen tank equipment, that was when he was all dressed to have his picture taken, and posed like a man from Mars emerging from the surf.

But before he took to underwater he conditioned himself a little and that was when we decided Jack really had it. In his becoming suit he waded out to just beyond the surf line with a lighted cigarette, then reclined in the water and, buoyed up by the air in the sponge rubber suit, lay floating on the surface of each successive wave and calmly smoked his cigarette.

Then he came back, got the rest of his equipment, swam out beyond the hook of land and in about half an hour returned to shore with two fine big abalones foolishly clinging to his chest as though they had found a fine rock on which to spend the rest of their lazy lives. Those lives were over quickly because it was only a matter of another half an hour before they were in the frying pan and the cry "come and get it", accompanied the tantalizing smell of the cooking abalones.

Mrs. McCausland

Mrs. Marjorie Musgrave McCausland, principal of both River and Woods Schools, died Saturday morning in a local hospital where she had been a patient since September.

Mrs. McCausland began teaching in the Carmel school system ten years ago as a first grade teacher at Sunset School. When Woods School was opened in 1949 she taught the kindergarten class and was also principal. Two years later Mrs. McCausland became full-time principal at Woods and took over the same position at River School when it was opened in 1952.

A true teacher, Mrs. McCausland considered the child as a student and a person and was interested in the development of the child as a whole. She believed that if children were happy and felt they belonged they could be taught anything.

"I have never seen a child twist its legs in so many knots", she remarked to a parent about one first grader, "the child doesn't want to be in school at all but there's some way of making this little person want to be with us and learn." Within six weeks the child wanted to be in school, wanted to learn and felt that Mrs. McCausland was a life-long friend.

Born in Hanford, California, on April 1, 1891, Mrs. McCausland took her bachelor's degree at San Jose State College and her administrative credential at USC. Before coming to Carmel she had been principal of the elementary school in Hanford her home town, had taught citizenship to foreigners in Los Angeles and also prisoners in jail.

Her marriage to the late Eric McCausland took place in 1929. Mr. McCausland died in 1948.

Survivors are a brother, R. Donald Musgrave of Aptos; and two nieces, Mrs. Nancy Newport of San Jose and Mrs. Frank Ford of Chicago, Illinois.

Private funeral services conducted by the Reverend Angus Dun, Jr., were held in the Mission Mortuary on Monday, followed by inurnment in the Pajaro Valley Memorial Park.

Friends wishing to honor Mrs. McCausland's memory are asked by her family to do so in the form of gifts to the American Cancer Research Society, Box 1028, Monterey.

Hi Chatter

Tonight at 7:00 o'clock a candle rally will be held at the high school. This type of rally is to replace the bonfire rally which had previously been held annually before the crucial Carmel-Pacific Grove football game. The reason for the change is that the bonfire rally and its burning in effigy of a Pacific Grove player is against CCAL rules. Tension runs high this week and if the spirit of the rooters can win a game, Carmel is sure to win the "Shoe" from Pacific Grove.

Today they buy $21 worth of gas and electricity for $14

... for the average unit cost is about 1/3 less than it was in 1935

In California today, the average family is using about three times as much gas and electricity as it did twenty years ago.

And, if you're like most Californians, you're probably using more and more gas and electricity, as you keep adding modern-living appliances and better lighting to your home. Because of this, your bill may be higher. But it is far lower than it would have been twenty years ago.

For, thanks to mass production economies, the average cost of a unit of gas and electricity is down about one-third. As an example, the Greens' gas and electric bill in a recent month was $14.73. In 1935, the same amount would have cost $20.88. Your own bill would probably show similar savings.

Can you think of any other prices that are lower today than 20 years ago? No wonder we say...

Gas and Electricity are cheap in California!

Love Letter To Carmel

BY GLENN CLAIRMONTE

It is such a pleasure in New York to read news of my friends in the Pine Cone that I decided to write a love letter to Carmel, and I am taking for the occasion Doubleday's handsome publication of Helen Keller's new book, Teacher: Anne Sullivan Macy.

In June of 1954 I was invited to a preview of Nancy Hamilton's film, The Unconquered, a documentary on Helen Keller which satisfactorily caught her in humorous and serious and public and private attitudes. When the screen darkened, Morgan Lewis, composer of the background music, resplendent with white carnation, escorted me, in one of the waiting sedans to the party at the producer's ground-floor-and-garden apartment in the East Fifties. He and I meant to cling but were soon lost to each other in a cloud of celebrities. Katherine Cornell, who had been narrator for the film, was at the door to greet us, and her husband, Guthrie McClintic, calling me by my old name "Joy," drew me aside to whisper about our mutual friend Rose Glass, the beautiful red-haired seventy-four-year old Seattle girl who inspires everyone she meets and who figured in Guthrie's book, Me and Kit (which he had just finished but which Little Brown has published only this fall).

Ruth Chatterton, who had just sold Doubleday two novels (submitted at first under a pseudonym to avoid favoritism) was there with her husband, and Brenda Forbes was talking on the phone to Margalo Gilmore and calling Helen Hayes to come quick. Helen Hayes' husband, Charlie MacArthur, asked me, "Do you belong to the Poor Helen Club? Everybody who knows Helen sympathizes with her being married to me. When we were married nearly thirty years ago everybody gave it three weeks." Then he insisted I should read Ben Hecht's book, A Child of the Century, "because he says nice things about me in it."

While maids hovered with tempting trays there were happy conferences on plays in prospect and serious discussions of work being done for polio victims, and almost everybody there had written or was writing an autobiography—including Helen Keller, who sat on a davenport. Kit Cornell knelt before her, leaning elbows on Helen's knees and talking to the expressive face which responded without any time-lag in spite of the fact that all impressions had to come by means of Polly Thompson's nimble fingers dancing in her palm. Then Rose Glass took the same posture, and she and Miss Keller congratulated each other on being the same age and on having recently attended the fiftieth anniversaries of their respective Alma Maters. Helen Keller was a substantial-looking matron, but Rose Glass was as girlish as she had been on our first meeting in France in 1918—of course the intervening years have provided for the automatic rejuvenation of women, anyway, and she is the example of eternal renewal. Nancy Hamilton's exquisite eyes and enviable blond haircut stood out at the last minute as Guthrie McClintic helped us into taxis and we floated down to the Village long after midnight.

Well, that was last year. And this year on a summer day which belied Dante's invention of the cold regions of the Inferno, I received a telephone call from Anzia Yezierska (whose Bread Givers, Arrogant Beggar, and All I Could Never Be had rocketed her to fame enough to make it possible for her to snub Hollywood, and who has since written Red Ribbon on a White Horse). She claimed to be dying of the heat, needing me to come at once. I had stopped in the city between two vacations, intending to dash out to Long Island as soon as I looked through a pile of mail, but I could not withstand the harrowing appeal. At risk of death in the heat I pilgrimaged uptown, expecting to arrive just in time to administer artificial respiration.

But Yezierska was hitting on all cylinders—

*Great Nature goddess, mother of the gods!
Although the ancient adoration nods,
Who has not felt her presence in the brush
Of winds at twilight with their hush-and-hush;
Beheld a golden sleeve outflung at dawn,
A woman's dark gaze in the soft-eyed fawn,
Her passion in the cadences that sing
When March is turning on the heel of Spring?
An emerald spirit glances from the sheen
Of many-skirted, universal green;
The silver variance in sea and bay
Reveal a feminine caprice at play;
A crackle and flash of Amazonian ire
Expostulates in tongued vermilion fire,
And vast tenderness of updraun soul
Is gathered like a cape in heaven's bowl.
Poseidon, Hades, Hestia, Hera, Zeus,
Own children, though their shrines fall in disuse,
Haunt grove and mead and stride on every hill,
And her protective arm is round them still,
Adjusted to horizon's blue immense
A wide maternal circle of defense.*

And the brilliance seems to tinkle
A pastoral serene in flow and flash.*

*The aspen is the Autumn's treasure-tree

*The temple of my faith is this,
The golden shore, the jasper sea,
Cloud-bannered, blue infinity,
The fitful winds' impulsive kiss;*

*Verbena on the warm dunes' sides,
Seagulls in flight of mystic grace,
The silvery breakers' cold embrace,
Sibyllic chanting of the tides;*

*The shell that is my sacred cup,
The dreams that string my minstrel's lyre,
The green and orange driftwood fire,
Whose briny incense wanders up.*

*Here, I'm content to know I'm one
With all the glory that I see,
And that my simple destiny
Is making music in the sun.*

—WALDEN GARRATT

merely struggling with her subconscious and deeper roots in an attempt to do justice to a Times review of Helen Keller's new book. She was trying to press into five hundred words all her convictions over thirty-five years since she had first met Helen Keller. I discovered that, although most people pity Helen Keller for having been born with physical handicaps, Yezierska was actually in the throes of a sublime envy, for she felt that she too might have been a symbol of courage to vast populations if only she too had been drawn out of her inhibitions and taught the virtuosity of her own talents by a Mrs. Macy. While dripping like a fountain in celebration of New York's humidity, I witnessed the birth not only of Yezierska's review of Helen Keller's book but also the birth of a new cycle in Yezierska's consciousness, for we extracted the juice of facts.

Then I escaped to Long Island and lived in a bathing suit until I had forgotten how to read and so could come back to this inundation of books and manuscripts with what any New Yorker writer would surely call a puccoon-lipped zest. And I found that Yezierska had told Doubleday to send me a copy of the book over which we had sweated. When I thanked her she told me to write an article about the book, adding, "And be sure to say that the introduction alone is worth the price of the book, for Mrs. Henney who wrote it is the great interpreter of all that Mrs. Macy did for the world through Helen Keller as an instrument." I bellowed through the phone: "Look here, I'm Taurus the Bull and can't be driven. If I write anything it will be what I want to write, not what you tell me to write!" So Yezierska, past master at temperament, gave a giggle and let me go.

I hung up and rushed out to the first annual meeting of the Alain Locke Memorial Committee (in 1916 I had first met Dr. Locke, that extremely erudite and influential Negro educator). One of the brilliant speakers was Dr. William Stanley Braithwaite (whose lifework was described in the Pine Cone under date of October 24, 1947), and never have I wandered into a more highly civilized assemblage. The meeting wound up with a luncheon at the New York University Faculty Club (at which it was discovered that the rhinestones in my hat made rainbows when I moved my head).

Then I spent the evening at a coffee hour where Hollis Alpert, an editor of the New Yorker, and Charles Angoff (When I Was a Boy in Boston, and other volumes of short stories) were the lions. We had such a book-talk session that all the rest of the world (even Princess Margaret's noble heartbreak) was forgotten.

At midnight I returned home and realized that, if I were ever to write about the book, I'd have to heed Tom Moore:

*The best of all ways
To lengthen our days
Is to steal a few hours
from the night, my dear.*

So, disregarding neighbors, I have pounded out this Love Letter to Carmel.

Pardon me now while I open this proud printer's product and read Helen Keller's Teacher: Anne Sullivan Macy.

TEVIS-STORER BOOK OUT

California Grizzly, by Tracy I. Storer and Lloyd P. Tevis, Jr., was published this week by the University of California Press. Storer is Professor of Zoology at the University of California and is known locally among serious amateur ornithologists for his bird studies on Point Lobos. Tevis, a member of the Carmel Tevis family, assisted Dr. Jean Linnsdale at the University's Hastings Reservation up Carmel Valley. A review of the book, which is designed for popular consumption as well as a source book for naturalists, will be published in the Pine Cone shortly.

Full House For The Wartons

Three girls and two boys is how the John Francis Warton family of Carmel Valley shapes up since the arrival of Patrick Joseph at the Monterey Hospital on November 1.

The girls are Cassandra, 7, Elizabeth, 6, and Michaela, 2, and the boys are John, 5, and brand new Patrick Joseph. The children's father, Lieutenant Warton, is at present on leave but departs on Saturday for his new station at Pearl Harbor, where he is to be on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet. His previous tour of duty with the destroyer command has kept him almost constantly at sea since his graduation from the Naval Postgraduate school so Mrs. Warton and the children have been living in the Valley since 1952. They plan to join Lieutenant Warton in Hawaii as soon as housing and transportation can be arranged for them.

Women Sponsor Scholarship

United Church Women of the Monterey Peninsula voted last Friday again to give a scholarship to finance a young person to serve as recreation and religious director among migrant workers in California in July-August, 1956.

Miss Dorothy Polk of Monterey, daughter of a faculty member of the Naval Postgraduate school, held the local U.C.W. scholarship last summer. The sum needed is $225, which will come partly from the women's treasury and partly from contributions from interested individuals.

At the forenoon session of the church women Miss Mabel Hoffman told of the difficult conditions of life in the Arab refugee camps in the Near East which she observed during a trip to the area last spring. Each of the Arab countries has received many thousands of persons who fled Israel when that country was formed out of parts of the Arab states, and they live chiefly upon aid from the United Nations and its members. So far little has been done to enable them to become self-supporting.

At the afternoon meeting Dr. Melville von Crombie spoke on the work carried on by various United Nations agencies in promoting health, welfare, improved nutrition and economic conditions among the less advanced nations of the world.

Mrs. Petersen was assisted in serving the guests by her two daughters, Pam and Susan, and their friends, Marjory Lloyd and Pamela Martineau.

Last week Mr. and Mrs. Abbott Silva had the opportunity of showing Carmel, the coast as far as Big Sur, and the Carmel Valley to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fulton of Cleveland, Ohio, for 30 years neighbors of the Silvas before they came to Carmel to live. It was a quick visit as the Fultons arrived on Friday afternoon from Los Angeles and left before noon on Saturday for San Francisco, but they covered a lot of local territory and Mr. Fulton even managed to attend the Audubon screen tour with Mr. Silva on Friday evening.

Sierra Clubbers In Los Padres

An enjoyable weekend was spent camping and hiking last Saturday and Sunday in the nearby section of the Los Padres National Forest by a group of fifteen persons. The outing was sponsored by the Loma Prieta Chapter of the Sierra Club. En route the group stopped to enjoy the view from the fire lookout on Chews Ridge. Ten car campers spent the night at China Camp. Side trips were taken along the Pine Ridge Trail and to the top of rocky Black Butte under the leadership of Fremont Ballou.

Five hardy knapsackers, under Mary Stewart-Hoopers, walked to Pine Valley and down to Hiding Camp to spend the night. They continued on down the Carmel River Sunday morning, completing a hike of about twenty-two miles on arrival at their cars at Los Padres Dam gate. Considerable rock hopping was necessary as some forty-five crossings of the river were necessary, but low water helped the hikers. Clear, mild weather prevailed and the autumn coloring on the maples, black oaks, bracken ferns and poison oak were at their best. In addition to the two leaders, both from Carmel, other local people making the trip were Miss Eloise

Conservation On The March

A Weekly Column by
O. Edward Graves
Western Representative,
National Parks Association

Conservation should not always be thought of in terms of dollars and cents. Originally the impetus to the conservation movement came from the desire to save our natural resources from exploitation for private gain. The early conservationists rightly felt that these resources should be held for the common good rather than wastefully used to make a few people wealthy. Thus the movement in its early stages dealt mainly with what might be called tangible resources.

I believe that in these later years the intangible values are coming to be recognized as just as important and perhaps even more so than the tangibles. The typical business man, of an intensely practical nature, would probably not agree with that statement. However even he would unhesitatingly admit that the intangible value called "patriotism" is of supreme importance. Let's consider it a bit.

Patriotism is usually defined as "love of country". One of our most popular patriotic hymns, America, refers to this love in two places. "Thy name, I love" stresses the same type of loyalty that appeals to college students and old grads in their traditional college songs and yells. A much deeper sense of loyalty—in fact, the very essence of patriotism—is expressed in the line: "I love thy rocks and rills; Thy woods and templed hills". This is love of the physical features of our typical countryside and it includes both the tangible and intangible aspects of our natural resources.

For who would deny that it would be difficult to love a countryside denuded of everything but stumps, with its hills eroded away or bulldozed for high-speed highways, its valleys a succession of silted-up reservoirs, and its wildlife all but exterminated by triggerhappy gunners? Except for the work of the country's conservationists this could very easily happen in the near future and has in fact already happened in many places.

These thoughts have been inspired in part by reading a pamphlet published by Mr. C. M. Goethe of Sacramento, entitled An Item of National Parks History. Mr. Goethe and his wife made a series of trips to Europe in the early decades of this century to study the methods used there in nature guiding. Their information led eventually to the initiation, with Mr. Goethe's help, of a nature guiding experiment at Lake Tahoe in 1919 under the direction of Dr. Harold C. Bryant, then of the University of California. Later Director Mather of the National Park Service became interested and Dr. Bryant's activities were transferred to Yosemite the following year. This was the beginning of the ranger-naturalist program in the national parks, of which Dr. Bryant later became the director, and which is now known as the "interpretive activities".

Of all the countries that the Goethes visited where nature guiding was practiced, Switzerland impressed them most "because of its dominant loyalty coloration". The Swiss are certainly known as one of the most intensely patriotic nations of the world. Might it not have something to do with the love for their "rocks and rills and woods and templed hills" that they have successfully inspired in their children through the same methods that we are now copying in our national parks?

Millard Asks Chest Workers To Put On Final "Big Push"

The Community Chest announces that it hopes to complete the current fund drive for $101,034 next Tuesday. With receipts now $55,000 for the entire Peninsula, Malcolm Millard, campaign chairman, has asked all solicitors to make a "big push" before that day.

Carmel stands high in early returns. Tuesday total for Carmel and environs was $28,576 with the business district, led by Chairman Jack Miller, topping its goal of $5,500 with $6,117.34 collected.

Mrs. James C. Doud, Residential Chairman, said workers have collected $14,615 against last year's total of $15,046. With many generous donors away on tour, prospects are most final returns will put Carmel over the top.

The November 15 date was set, Millard said, to facilitate checking on areas where the campaign needs additional work. Cleanup teams will be organized after that to cover the weak spots.

He also suggested that would be contributors need not wait for a Chest solicitor. "Send your donations directly to the Community Chest care of the Monterey Post Office," Millard said. "And your contribution will be credited to Carmel."

Grace Studybaker

The unexpected death of Grace Ely Studybaker occurred on Tuesday in a San Francisco hospital. Mrs. Studybaker entered the hospital a week ago for surgery and was thought to be progressing well when a sudden relapse resulted in her death on November 8.

She was born in Washington, D. C. on September 28, 1900, and her marriage to A. D. Studybaker took place in Washington in 1933. Mrs. Studybaker and her husband came to Carmel in 1937 and Mrs. Studybaker was so charmed by the beauty, warmth and friendship which she found here that in 1947 they purchased a house at Carmelo and Fourteenth Streets and Mrs. Studybaker devoted a great deal of her time to cultivating the lovely garden which now surrounds the house, and creating an atmosphere of charm and friendship in her home.

During her Carmel residence, Mrs. Studybaker worked with the AAWS and was a member of the Church of the Wayfarer congregation.

She is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. Sylvia Cushman, Lake Tahoe, and Mrs. Elizabeth Stewart of Chevy Chase, Maryland; and one aunt, Mrs. Grace Darling Ely of Carmel.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the Carmel Presbyterian Church with Dr. K. Fillmore Gray officiating. Inurnment will follow at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove. Paul Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

FIRST VALLEY EPISCOPAL MISSION SERVICE SUNDAY

ine Smith, John Chitwood and Carl Patnude, bemused by the blandishments of the Coaxial Cable Corporation's attorney, voted at last month's meeting to repeal an ordinance passed by a previous, more sophisticated council, which required that the cable television company place their unsightly transformers underground. The ordinance permitting the company to disinter the boxes came up for second reading and adoption at this meeting, but Patnude asked for a revision to give the council some control over the location of the boxes and their appearance. The new ordinance as passed by the same three, will have second reading at the December meeting.

Mayor Horace Lyon and Francis Whitaker voted against the revised version as they had the original, Whitaker saying: "It's not that three members of the council have passed this against the recommendation of the planning commission and the landscaping commission that disappoints me, but that apparently nobody in Carmel cares."

The ordinance will come up for final reading and adoption at the December meeting. If anybody does care, he should get in touch with Francis Whitaker or the Pine Cone, or write a letter to the city council.

Why Not A Sales Tax On Motels To Pay For An Auditorium

sula. It is accessible from highways leading to Pacific Grove, Monterey, Pebble Beach and Carmel commanding a view of both Carmel Bay and Monterey Bay.

The first meeting for discussion of plans for a proposed civic auditorium was held Dec. 9, 1946 at a luncheon in Del Monte Lodge and presided over by Mr. Hal Garrett.

This week I have talked with quite a few people who attended that first meeting and who remember several gifts offered or presented to the auditorium committee. The above mentioned site was offered as a gift from Del Monte Properties. All that property was originally sold by the Jacks family to the Pacific Improvement Co. for $5.00 an acre. Naturally it is worth more today. Mr. and Mrs. Holman of Holman's Store in Pacific Grove gave a check for $5,000.00 which was returned after a few years when work on the project was discontinued. Tau Mu Sorority also made a gift and W. L. Hudson offered legal services which were accepted.

A corporation was legally organized through Sacramento which functioned for several years and did much constructive research. Four or five auditoriums in other areas were investigated and it was decided that the auditorium should be built from private subscription and that maintenance afterward would not greatly increase taxation.

Today I questioned a well-known Monterey attorney as to the possibility of placing a very small sales tax on commodities. He thought that might be another means of raising the necessary funds. He also told me of a successful method which had been used in Germany. Each restaurant or hotel bill had a small amount added perhaps twenty-five cents. By that method they had built a very fine cultural center with auditoriums and other buildings, beautifully landscaped.

Has the Peninsula really become alive musically? Shall we activate that unleashed enthusiasm and build that much needed Auditorium right now?

FOX IN P.G. & E. MAGAZINE

An article in the last issue of P. G. and E. Progress highlights the long career of Charles I. Fox of Carmel, station chief of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company's giant steam electric generating plant at Moss Landing.

Fox is a 25-year veteran of service with Pacific Gas and Electric Company, but he had amassed a series of varied and interesting vocational experiences before he joined the public utility in 1930. He was born at Hanford in 1894. He left Delano High School after three years to work on farms in the San Joaquin Valley. At 20 he had his first taste of the electric business working for the Sierra and San Francisco Power Company at its North Beach plant in San Francisco. Later he worked as a machinist for the Southern Pacific Railroad, spent several years going to sea, toiled in a Utah copper mine and tried his hand as an auto accessory salesman.

Fox and his wife had always dreamed of settling in Carmel when he retired, little knowing that his duties with PG&E would bring him to this area years before retirement. In May, 1951, he was appointed assistant station chief at Moss Landing and in September, 1952, assumed his present post.

She shared with her husband, Robert H. McDonald, a great love of the out-of-doors and together they hunted and fished during their leisure time and took many camping trips into rugged parts of the country.

Besides her husband she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Vira Campbell of San Francisco, and two brothers, James Campbell of Carmel and Edwin Dodge Campbell of Placerville.

News of the recent death of Mrs. Helen Kreps at the age of 92, in Sloat, Plumas County, was received this week by her Carmel friends.

Mrs. Kreps left Carmel five years ago to live with her son, Jack Kreps, in Sloat, and so brought to a close over 20 years residence in Carmel. Mrs. Kreps came here shortly after her husband, the late Colonel J. L. Kreps, retired from the army due to ill health.

She was a devoted gardener and during the years that she lived in Carmel spent much of her time pursuing this hobby.

1956 CLIPPERS OFFER PUSH-BUTTON MOTORING

DETROIT—The 1956 line of Clipper models makes available the first real concept of electric push-button motoring with an electrically-responsive push-button ultramatic transmission. Heading the medium priced Clipper line of five models which will be in dealers showrooms in November is the Constellation hardtop, (pictured).

This new push-button driving system overcomes the frailties of human temperament and reflexes and does the driver's thinking for him. It opens the door for the first time to the ultimate in push-button, atomic-age motor car operation. With push-button ultramatic, it is impossible for a driver to select a wrong driving selection.

Operation of the push-button driving system is portrayed schematically (above). The driver's forefinger puts touch-pressure on the push-button "D" for "Drive." With no mechanical linkage to overcome, touch-pressure of the forefinger sends electrical signal (course of signal shown by arrows) down from push-button console, located on steering column, through wire to "servo-motor." Upon receipt of electric signal, servo-motor turns in proper direction to actuate worm and segment gear which rotates range selector shaft which, in turn, chooses driving position indicated by driver's forefinger on push-button. The selection made, circuit of electrical power is broken off until need for another driving range selection. All this procedure takes place in smallest fraction of a second.

Incorporating the greatest number of safety features available for any automobile, the Clipper line is powered by the highest horsepower and torque performance engines in the medium-price field. The new V-8 engines which range from 240 horsepower, in the Deluxe and Super lines up to 270 in the Custom line, are teamed with an improved ultramatic transmission which offers a double "kick-down" for added highway safety. Torsion bar suspension, termed the most important development in riding comfort and safety since 1934, becomes standard equipment on 1956 Clipper models.

As a major phase of the overall Studebaker-Packard corporation program to develop as a producer of automobiles for all price classes, the Clipper line for 1956 has been styled and engineered to become the "hot car" of the medium-price field. It is a powerful car with a look of power, yet in good taste.
